Applications are being sought for two full-time, tenure-track faculty positions in the Department of Health Services Research, Management and Policy. Applicants of all ranks will be considered including recent graduates from PhD programs. Applicants must have a doctorate in health services research or a relevant, related discipline. Post-doctoral experience for new graduates is considered a plus. Successful candidates will have clearly defined expertise in an area of health services research. The department has a particular need for faculty who can teach health care management, organizational theory, and health economics to doctoral and masters students. Successful applicants at the Associate or Full Professor level will have a strong track record of external grant funding.

Duties include research in the area of expertise, pursuit of external funding, teaching and mentoring of students, and service to the department. These are full-time (1.00 FTE), 12-month positions, expected to start in Fall of 2015.

Health Services Research, Management, and Policy is one of nine departments in the College of Public Health and Health Professions. The department offers a Master of Health Administration (MHA) degree program, a PhD in Health Services Research, and the Public Health Management and Policy concentration within the college’s Master of Public Health program. More information on the department can be found at: http://hsrmp.phhp.ufl.edu/.

The University of Florida is a comprehensive doctoral research-extensive university that includes a full range of academic departments and programs (www.ufl.edu).
